defining a code (v0.0)

a code item is a statement that identifies an action, activity, position, allowance, procedure, or question

a code group groups a set of code items

. in addition to associating the items under a statement, the code group may specify the context under which the code items are to be evaluated and acted upon this is what the open-source code could look like in Humanekind:

PRODUCT <source code, blueprints, documentation>
- is open-source and available at no financial cost

DEVELOPMENT MODEL
- decentralized and collaborative software development

LICENSOR GRANTS PERMISSION TO
- use, view, modify, redistribute, document product

LICENSOR PROMOTES & SUPPORTS
- open-source movement
- universal access

the Humanekind code

only human beings who assert that they will honor and adhere to this code can be members of Humanekind

- . those who violate it, can be purged, unless 80 percent of the population agrees to give the offender a chance at redemption through five acts that benefit humankind
- . otherwise, the offender is barred from Humanekind for five years

humanity includes every human being on earth, and every human being on earth is part of humanity

- . this means that humanity is inherently diverse and inclusive
- . these are characteristics that cannot be denied, unless the purpose is the destruction of humanity itself
- . therefore, accepting the factuality of diversity and inclusion in anything having to do with humanity and human beings is a strict requirement for membership into Humanekind
- . however, to promote harmony and avoid stupid, idiotic fights with morons, we MUST NOT INCLUDE anyone who thinks that some of us must be excluded from humanity because of whatever

: balancing personal freedoms and personal rights is critical to live harmoniously
- everybody has the right to the fair, equitable application of rules
